Without revealing too much information, our school just might be Washtenaw's best kept secret. Little is known about the school in the cornfield...the one without a town. After years of staying under the radar, the time has come to shed light on this sleepy school who struggles to find its way in sports, spirit, test scores and financial resolve, but has enough heart and will power to rival any school, anywhere.

Suspicious ACTIVITY

LIFESTYLES & EVENTS

Risky business and scandalous affairs occur in and out of school daily. Secrets, lies and furtive actions prevail in the life of a teen. Preventing parents, teachers and any other adult from delving into our private world is a constant, but necessary, struggle to achieve independence and life experience.

When it comes right down to it, our suspicious activities are not so secret after all. Out of the classroom, most of us share in common, everyday events: using the parking lot and the school restroom; preventing accidents and embarrassments; finding solace and entertainment in our iPods, cell phones, gaming systems, etc; attending Homecoming and Cominghome, as well as the games they celebrate; sharing a meal, a laugh, a cry, a rumor with friends and essentially just doing whatever it takes to get by. Sure, student lifestyles are a mystery to everyone, but they are ours to uncover.

Class of 2008's Last Thoughts on Spirit Week and Pep Assemblies:

Tyler Wittico, '08

"Spirit week is a blast. I don't participate but I like to make fun of what people wear. They are always ridiculous.

"I always looked forward to spirit week and the pep assembly. Going crazy at the pep assembly was awesome!

Josh Watkins '08

Brian Bush '08

"Spirit week is the best week of the year. To think that there won't be more spirit weeks and pep assemblies sucks!"

"Seniors keep it hype, but we never seem to win at the pep assembly. I go all out for spirit week"

Christopher Butt '08

Underclass Impressions

Danielle Ramirez '11

"Our class was pretty non-participatory, so it was all right. I guess. All in all it was a good experience, but not as much fun as it could have been."

Ashley DeHart '10

"I love spirit week. It's a week that I don't have to worry about what to wear. I just go all out. I just dress up in funky outfits and dance around the school."

Steven Lewis '09

"I felt like I was really into spirit week this year. But I didn't get to go to Homecoming [dance]. unfortunately."

Spirit Week, Pep Assembly Make Their Mark in the History Books

Pulled Off Another One

By Morgan Kocis '09 and Brittany Price '09

Juniors flooded the halls with smiling faces after winning the events at the pep rally. Traditional spirit days consisted of simple hats, wacky clothes, leading to Friday's schools colors. The day of the pep assembly, the junior class came alive, anxious to win their third consecutive year.

"The juniors showed heart and integrity toward their class by sweeping the pep rally," said Briana Carter '09, who is class president.

During the pep assembly, hallways were quiet and empty. But the gymnasium told quite a different story. Bleachers were filled with screaming students cheering on their classes by waving Pom-Poms, balloons, streamers, silly string, foam fingers, you-name-it, just to be heard.

Various competitive events went on at the pep assembly, such as: the three-legged race, a pie-eating contest, the soda-chug and tug-of-war. The competition was tight, though due to unruly fans on the floor, the senior class tug-o-war victory was disqualified, leading to a junior win.

"Brandon [Boyle] and I won the three-legged race for the third year in a row. We pretty much are the champs of it; no one can take us down," said Joseph Sibert '09.

The grand prize for winning the pie contest? The opportunity to smash a pie in the face of Mr. Evans.

"I was glad eating a whole pie paid off with the excitement and humor of pie-ing the school's most famous hall monitor. Revenge is a beautiful thing," said Julius Kidd '09.

The War is On

As tough-girl Jackie Vallance '08 pulls her team to victory, she is met with disappointment. "I was so excited when we won tug-o-war! Then they said we cheated and I wanted to rip someone's head off!" said Vallance, after the disqualification.

Suck it Up

Showing senior spirit, Geoff Janowiak '08, said "Chugging that Pepsi was the worst experience ever, basically I felt really sick, I'm glad I was the only one finishing."

In Living Color

Strutting his stuff down the hall, Kyle Vanderlip '09 gets cheers and jeers from classmates. "Wacky Wednesday is a hit every spirit week. I borrowed my friend's dress and her boa... everything else I just found around my house," said Vanderlip.

Homecoming Night Packed With New Experiences

Hope Floats

By Sara Duda '10

A football game with high hopes, jewel colored dresses swirling through the crowd and floats circling around the track. What else could it be but Homecoming?

The team entered the game with high aspirations, and with a little luck, maybe even a home-win. And luck appeared to be on our side up until the third quarter. Despite a respectable team effort and an early lead, a win was not to be.

"I really did think we had a good shot. Still, it's progress," said Nia Scott '11.

The Homecoming court, decked out in formal dresses and up-dos waited to be introduced at halftime. Danielle Jenkins '08 was crowned queen, but the whole court felt honored to be recognized.

"I was very happy because last year I didn't make it," said Jessica Mitchell '09, who was a part of the Queen's Court.

The theme for Homecoming was locations, and the floats took that on. They were spread out over the globe, from Niagara Falls to Hollywood to Egypt and Tokyo. The freshmen class won the contest with Niagara Falls.

"It was a little tough building the float. We started with only 15 people, but we ended up getting more people to help," said Chad Opfermann '11.

All together the game, the floats and the queen with her court formed the Homecoming experiences and memories that the people involved will remember forever.

Waterfall Winners

The freshmen float, which won first place, used Niagara Falls and "Drown Bedford" as their theme. They used bubbles and a moving donkey to catch the crowd's eye.

Catching Up

Working on the sophomore float, Samantha Pinter '10, Rachel Serafinski '10, Allison Chan '10 and Martha Schmitt '10 take a minute to catch up. "I don't see my friends much in school, so it was nice to talk to them at float building," said Chan.

Court's in Session

The Way I See It: Four Student Perspectives

"I'm used to being in the stands cheering and it was a new experience being on the field having people cheer for me."

Queen Danielle Jenkins '08

Senior Daniel Gillum

"It felt like I was coming back for the game and I had already graduated from high school."

"My first Homecoming was pretty cool, it was different, exciting and new all at the same time."

Freshman Lianna Pittman

Quarterback Andrew Dillon '10

"Being on the field is a lot better than being in the stands. I feel like I'm actually doing something for my school"

Hollywood Crew

Working on the sophomore float, themed "Hollywood", Corey MacIsaac '10 helps to make flowers for the skirt. "It was hard getting everything organized, but it was all really fun," said MacIsaac.

Diverse Styles on Display at Homecoming Dance

The Fash Bash

By Tianna Wills '08

Fashion, fashion and more fashion. That was what Homecoming was all about. Questions ran through students heads the whole time they were shopping and deciding what will catch people's eyes the most. There were a wide range of trends: from long gowns to short cocktail dresses to leggings with long sweaters. Colors varied with each style.

At the stores, there were many varieties to choose from on the racks.

"When I went to Deb's at Westland Mall there were a lot of hoochie dresses," said Brittney Davis '09.

At the dance, spectators saw many short dresses in a variety of styles.

"The most common dress length this year was short because it was warmer outside and they're not too formal," said Danielle Lauth '10.

This was the last Homecoming dance for seniors, who made sure that they looked especially spectacular for the occasion.

"Since it was my last one I wanted to look nicer and I tried to find the perfect dress, jewelry and shoes," said Malak Ismail '08.

There were also some who wanted to match their date's attire.

"My date and I matched perfectly from head to toe, literally. The color of the night was black, and we were one of the best dressed couples," said Daisha Hale '08.

Hot Chocolate

Getting down in brown, Ebony Johnson '08 shows off her dance moves in this little strappy dress. Brown, though not typical, has made a comeback in recent years and can be very trendy and stylish.

The Little Black Dress

A must in any girl's wardrobe, Leigh Hollen '10, Candice Holm '09 and Gabrielle Barden '09 showcase this classic look. "I wanted to wear this black dress because it was a party dress and it was cute," said Barden.

Dancing Diva

Enjoying her last Homecoming, Raven Burrus '08 literally gets down with her date Aaron Mitchell '08. "Droppin' it like it's hot for senior year with Aaron is all I cared about," said Burrus.

How do you think teens will dress at Homecoming in 20 years?

"I think teens will dress very crazy and wild. The girls will have a lot of the cleavage and body parts showing."

Ryan Walton '09

Camille Foreman '08

"Twenty years from now teenagers will still be dressing like 80's babies. We just recycle styles and put our own twists."

"I think by the year 2027, public exposure and nakedness will be legalized, so I think they'll all be naked."

Jason Manalp '08

Rebecca Cavill '08

"They're going to come up with a more wild style to stand out, hopefully more flashy than trashy."

Project Runway
Showing off the cocktail dress trend, Erika Hankins '10, Nicole Harrison '10, Amber Stumbo '10, Brooke Barnett '10 and Chelsea Weeks '10 get into line formation. It was also trendy to go with a group of friends rather than a date.

"I loved the light green color and the sparkles. Plus, I got it from my friend's sister, so it was sweet. I had other choices, but this one was my fav".

Danielle Jenkins '08

"I heard everyone was wearing short dresses and I didn't like it because I don't have the legs for a short dress."

Kirsty Hunter '08

Summer Glow

Working to get the year-round tan, Samantha Pinter '10 lays in a tanning bed. "I've always liked the heat, and I think it gives you a nice base for summer so you don't burn," said Pinter

Think Before You Do, Look Before You Leap

Cody Schubert '10

"If I went to do something that could hurt someone then I'll think about it, but otherwise I'll just go for it."

"If I do something that could be dangerous, I think about all so that I don't make a stupid mistake."

John Oliver '08

Joshua Harmon '09

"If it's a little dangerous and exciting, your mind is moving too fast to think it through, so you just go with it."

"If I do something that could be dangerous I mostly think it through because it could affect me for the rest of my life."

Shannon Rider '10

Danger Trends

Of three common things that high school students do, what do you think is the most dangerous...tanning, tattoos or piercings?

76% Tanning Beds

16% Tattoos

8% Piercings

Fight Club

As a large crowd gathers around a fight in the hallway hoping to catch a glimpse of the action, Mr. Nuttall subdues one of the combatants.. "If the fight's bad I stay away, other than that I get close to it," said Alicia Miles '10.

Dangers Hidden In High School Halls

Caution: Danger Zone

By Sara Duda '10

You never know what danger might be lurking around the corner. In a high school, that's absolutely true. Things to watch out for? Think: Science labs, mice scurrying through classrooms, slippery floors due to slush or food and fights in the halls.

With new state laws in place regarding Chemistry, it is inevitable that all students will encounter a chem lab. These sometimes involve chemicals and most of the time, fire. Chemistry teachers spend days at the start of the year going over lab rules, hazards and procedures in case of emergency. The top rules include: 1. Never touch the gas pipes and 2. You must always wear goggles and aprons.

"Anything could happen, including an explosion," said Mrs. Maxwell.

Vermin was also a factor. It would not be a surprise to be sitting in English quietly reading, when a field mouse would scurry across the floor in search of warmth and sustenance. As a result, food and candy was banned from classrooms to keep the mice away yet students keep the rebellion going and continued to sneak food in and leave crumbs and wrappers behind.

"If they say no food, people will just do it anyways, like they already do," said Dashara Cabay '10.

Fights in the hallways, often surrounded by gawkers, pose a threat as well. The mob mentality can take over starting a chain reaction, people push to see the "action" and adult staff cannot get through to break it up.

"People could probably get pulled into the fight. If you get too into it, then it could happen," said Jordan Cooper '11.

Look around the school, what do you see? A safe place most likely. Look closer, check behind walls and around corners. High school can actually be more dangerous than you think.

Fired Up

During a Chemistry II Magic Show, Rebecca Studer '09 and Spencer Danehy '08 light their project, producing lime green flames. "My project could have blown up, it had a low flash point," said Danehy

Lincoln, Ink

Arm wrestling in class, Dustin Goette '08 and Geoffrey Janowiak '08 show off Goette's tattoo. "The place was clean, I was more worried about taking care of it to prevent infection," said Goette.

Disturbing Events Occur in the Parking Lot

In a LOT of Trouble

By Brittany Price '09

One foot out of the high school doors and the stench was strong enough to make you choke. A mob of people were surrounding a car holding their noses and laughing hysterically.

Underneath a blue Ford Probe there were a swarm of flies around a racoon carcass, which explained the stench. Questions were going around such as "Who did it?", "Whose car is this?", "Why would someone pick up road kill?".

It got around that the car belonged to Christopher Butt '08.

"I was at lunch. A bunch of people called to tell me. When I got there, people were still waiting to see my reaction. I just hopped in my car punched it and smashed the racoon," said Butt.

As it turned out, it was all a practical joke played by one of Butt's friends. Gross, yes, but virtually harmless considering the roadkill was already dead.

Less funny, and certainly more serious, six vandalisms and 16 thefts have been reported in the parking lot during school hours first semester.

"The statistics provided indicate apprehended perpetrators only. I would imagine the number of crimes that either go unreported or the crime goes unsolved is much, much higher. However, in the parking lot, the biggest problem is illegal contraband such as smoking cigarettes, marijuana, etc," said Deputy Gontarski.

Cody Watkins '09 had a radio and subwoofers stolen out of his 1998 red Chevy Blazer.

"I don't see a point in freaking out when there's nothing I can do. I don't know who did it, and there were no witnesses," said Watkins.

Advancing from riding the bus to being able to drive to school opens a whole new door of temptations, along with responsibilities. Many doors lead right out of school. It's called skipping.

"It all starts when your upperclassmen friends skip then it makes you want to. When I first started driving I knew I could just leave when I wanted without getting caught, but as you get older you realize you have to be in school," said Daisha Hale '08.

Sunny Side Up
Sticking out like a sore thumb, Victoria Truhn '09's Chevy Cobalt brightens the parking lot.

"I loved my ball of sunshine but, unfortunately, I totalled it," said Truhn.

The Silver Bullet
It's a dream for most teens to get a car on their sixteenth birthday. This dream came true for Morgan Kocis, '09.

"My car is my baby it gets me places fast. Yes, I speed, but I love it," said Kocis.

Average Joe

Not what one would call popular, but for a 16-year-old boy, a mini-van is all he needs. "I was racing down Hitchingham in my van and I hit about 90 mph and beat Cassie [Oswald '09]. It was amazing!" said Joseph Sibert. '09.

No More Excuses!

"I would say that my mom just called and said that there was a family emergency and I needed to get home really fast!"

Danielle Ramirez '11

Alex Neitling '09

"If I was ever pulled over I would say that I was sick and had to get home...QUICK!"

"I would truly cry. I would tell him I was in my own little world, with the radio up and singing to the music."

Jessica Mitchell '09

Christopher DeHart '09

"When I was pulled over I pretended that I didn't know I was going that fast. I ended up with a ticket."

Tag-a-Long

As the first day of exams draws to a close, study buddies Ashley DeHart '10 and Jacquelyn Sweeney '10 jump in. "Usually I ride the bus, and hate every second. It's loud and I always have to sit by nasty people. I'd rather drive every day," said Sweeney.

The Blue Streak

All white with two blue stripes makes this truck appear to be a hot rod. William Mick '09 customized his truck to fit his high-octane personality.

"I try to get out of class early so that I don't have to wait in line to get out of the parking lot."

Tyler Wittico '08

"I don't drive to school yet, but when I do the first thing I'm going to do is speed my way over to 7-11 and get myself a slurpee!"

John Ardner '09

Double Take
Looking in the mirror, Tacarra Tswago '09 runs her hands under warm water to fix her hair. It was not uncommon to find a mad rush to the bathroom during homeroom.

Describe Your Ultimate School Bathroom:

Chris Chie '08

"It would be a log cabin atmosphere, with big LCD TV'S and a PS3 and soft toilet paper. Also, automatic flush."

"I would want it to have these things: heat, smoke detectors, air fresheners, hand sanitizer and automatic sinks."

Asia Miller '09

Joshua Ritchey '08

"Actually it would be clean for once, and have lounge chairs to sit on. Also, A PS3 with a flat screen TV and a fruit punch fountain."

"It would be as simple as hot water, locks on doors, soap, paper towels and clean stalls. Things that our school lacks."

Rhiana Abrams '09

Wouldn't You Like to Know?

Despite their shortcomings, do you use the school rest rooms?

95% You gotta go if you gotta go.

3% Absolutely Not!

2% Undecided.

Behind Door #1
Hesitating to enter, Brittany Price '09 walks up to the door to take a bathroom break during class. Upon seeing the mess, she decided to wait or use another rest room.

The Truth About What Goes On Behind Closed Doors

You're Invited to a Potty!

By Morgan Kocis '09

On any given day, a student lights up in the school bathroom. Whether a cigarette, or something more, most likely that student got away with it. This was just one of the problems plaguing our "rest" rooms. Graffiti involving threats and libelous remarks was another serious issue. There were also many hygiene complaints regarding the cleanliness and availability of paper products.

"I think its stupid because you're just innocently going to the bathroom and you have to smell smoke. I feel it's unsanitary," said Amber Ivan '09.

Graffiti covered many walls and stalls in each of the bathrooms. Despite custodial efforts to cover the hurtful words slashed across one side and love notes written on another, each layer of paint simply provided a new canvas.

"The J POODLE graffiti is ridiculous, but all the other stuff doesn't bother me, I just ignore it," said Karl McKeenhan '08.

One problem the school had control over was the upkeep. Unfortunately, due to custodial budget cuts, there was more work than workers and bathrooms sometimes got overlooked. Common complaints involved a lack of toilet paper, hand towels and soap.

"I think that our bathrooms are very disgusting. They need to mop the floors, clean the dang toilets and give us toilet paper and some soap to wash our hands!" said Dawn Mulder '09.

Blame for the bathroom conditions should be shared equally between student and district. Until the two can come to an agreement, don't expect a change.

Mirror, Mirror on the Wall

As the mirror reflects the condition of this empty bathroom, the attempt to cover the graffiti with white paint is apparent.

Wishy Washy

Taking a bathroom break, Kathleen Thomas '09 washes her hands in one of the few bathrooms that have soap. The only thing this bathroom lacked was a mirror. It was a good day for Thomas.

Winter Blasts Replaced with Lincoln Blues

Keeping Spirits High

By Sara Duda '10 and Morgan Kocis '09

Crazy, wacked-out clothes, class colors and pep rally games were on the agenda during Coming Home Spirit Week, which was chock full of tradition and predictability. However, there were plenty of surprises throughout the week.

An additional two days were added to the usually shortened second spirit week: country/western day and Mardi Gras day (to accentuate the dance theme). Some students found these days limited their creativity.

"For Mardi Gras day, there were only beads and the colors [green, purple, gold]. I think there should have been more choices," said Kelsie Duarard '11.

New games graced the usual pep Assembly roster, including "Bob for Mr. Potato Head" and a scooter relay, which joined classic favorites such as tug-o-war.

"The scooter relay was fun, but hard because some of the plungers didn't work. I miss the eating contests; I love watching people eat the crazy food," said Brandon Farrell '10.

Spirited juniors won the Coming Home Pep rally, adding to their Homecoming win for a clean sweep.

"I did what I could to help my class win, and I got a little bit crazy, but I think it helped," said Gage Castle '09.

Shout Out Loud
As the Boys basketball team is introduced, Nathan McMullen '08, Terrence Williams '08 and James Sparkman '08 show senior pride. "I was thinking that we were about to smash in Pioneer's head and the seniors were really rowdy," said McMullen.

Queens of Wacky

On Wacky Wednesday Jazmine Keyes '10 and Brittany Till '10 stop by their lockers to compare crowns. "I wore Morgan's shoes and they were killing me, but other than that Wacky Wednesday was good," said Till.

Face First

Fishing for Mr.Potato Head pieces, Amanda Hogan '10 grabs at them with her teeth and drops them to James Cheese '10 who put it all together. "The water was really cold, and I was just thinking: Beat Everyone," said Hogan.

What's Your Dream Spirit Week Day?

"I would want Palama Day because I can be lazy and there's less getting ready required."

Emily Samuelson '09

Blake Boyle '11
 "Halloween Day because you can go crazy and get totally dressed up in costumes without worrying about how you look."

"Birtnday Suit day. Because, I mean, why not? It's all natural."

Brian Bush '08

Lindsey Ellis '10
 "I would want Fairy Tale day because it'd be fun to see everyone dressed up in all those prince and princess outfits."

Watch and Learn

Concentrating on their classmates, Brittany Ripple '10, Sarah Adkins '10, Kelsey Janowiak '10 and Amy Barber '10 watch the competition. "I love watching my class participating and rooting them on," said Adkins.

"The pep assembly was sad for me because it was my last one, but I had a lot of fun because the seniors were extra hype."

Daniel Gillum '08

"I liked performing with the band, but I wish I could sit with my class so I could be a part of the activities."

Kaitlin Moffett '09

Trust In Me

Taking a break from dancing, Alexander Neitling '09 and Megan Marchildon '10 spend time together to catch up after spending some time apart. "Megan and I had an agreement that we would dance with other people during the dance. We trust each other," said Neitling.

Date or No Date? That is the Question.

Aaron Jarvis '10

"I would like to have a date because I know that I would always have someone to dance with the whole time and that is way more fun."

"I don't like bringing a date because then you're stuck with that person the entire night. I like to dance with everyone."

Jessica Mitchell '09

Christopher DeHart '09

"I would rather have a date because I've gone to dances alone and didn't have nearly as much fun as I did when I took a date."

"It's nice to have a date, but sometimes it's better to be with just friends and have a good time."

Sarah Burnett '08

When You've Got It, Flaunt It

Getting her groove on, Jacqueline Sweeney '10 sports a short, flirty dress which started out as a floor-sweeping casual and later pinned up for maximum dance movement. "The dance was way better than last year. I didn't want a date; I wanted to go with my best friends," said Sweeney.

"Coming Home was a very special night to me because I was able to spend it with an amazing boy."

Amy Barber '10

"I went with Faith Blackburn '10. I was expecting more people to show up. It was my second time going. I liked the music and the food was pretty good."

Brian England '09

Students Come Ready to Celebrate Basketball, Mardi Gras

Beads and Buddies

By Brittany Price '09

The Official New Orleans Mardi Gras street party, an annual celebration gathering millions of revelers, ended well before our Coming Home Dance, but that did not keep the beads from flying here.

Dancers showed up with dozens of beads hanging around their necks, and some even had traditional feathered masks. While not everyone followed the theme, the timing made sense.

"The theme was all right for a February dance," said John Ardner '09.

Semi-formal wear and no tennis shoes or jeans were the attire requirements. Still, a few students wore jeans without penalty, begging the question: why the lack of consistency?

"If jeans are comfy and look good, I say go for it," said Brittany Sarna '08.

Coming Home tends to be less popular the Homecoming, resulting about half the attendance at the dance. The winter weather may contribute to the apathy, as well as a casual atmosphere and fewer events. Additionally, the King and his Court received little acknowledgement in comparison with the publicity the Homecoming Queen and her Court receive in the fall.

Pretty In Pink

Dressed less to impress than ready to show their best moves, Shayna Lamar '09 and Johnette Williams '09 went with comfy-casual. "It was funny too see what half of the girls had on, when we were wearing common clothes," said Williams.

Making Memories

Excited to see each other, Ashley DeHart '10 and Nia Scott '11 hug with happiness. "The Mardi Gras theme was all right, but I think since it was so close to Valentine's Day that a Valentine theme would have been better," said Scott.

"A Black Tie Affair" Turns Out to Be... One Elegant Evening

By Morgan Kocis '09

On May 17, the elegant dresses and snazzy suits that were chosen with such careful deliberation days, weeks or months prior made their grand entrance at the junior-senior prom held in the ballroom of EMU's new Student Union.

"My dress was so expensive. I had to actually buy it, then get it altered to fit me perfectly. But it turned out the way I wanted it in the end," said Amber Ivan '09.

Limos and freshly washed and waxed extravagant cars lined the sidewalk, as students made their way into the new venue, anticipating an evening they would never forget.

"I was so excited for our limo. We reserved it, like, two months in advance, and when it showed up, it wasn't all it was cracked up to be," said Jessica Cooper '09.

Students snapped pictures here and there and people danced everywhere. Girls slipped off their shoes and boys flung off their jackets as a big projector screen flashed the latest music video of the song playing.

"I thought that the ballroom was so amazing! The class of 2009 did a great job! We have a lot to live up to for next year," said Megan Marchildon '10.

Get Down

Dancing with friends, Stephanie Cantrell '08, Paul Bowling '08 and Roxana Hernandez '08 get "freaky deaky" on the dance floor. Threesomes and other group dancing were more common than couples.

Baby Got Back

Adjusting her train for the next pose, Mollie Patton '09, along with Morgan Kocis '09 and Sara Duda '10 join their dates for the next photo. "My dress was so pretty but the train was extremely annoying and I had to keep pulling it up all night," said Patton.

A Friend, Indeed

During one of the few slow songs that were played Brittany Hall '08 and Stephen Brown '08 shared it together. "I had the best time spending prom with Stephen! Going with my best friend was definitely a good choice!" said Hall '08.

Where Would be the Ultimate Place to Hold Prom?

"The ultimate place would be outside, like on a beach, where everyone could just kick back and have fun."

Kaitlin Moffett '09

Anthony McClure '08

"The best place would be at a casino in Las Vegas."

"The best place would be a big room where live bands would play music. Kind of like a concert. It would be sweet!"

Steven Michowski '09

Austin Pitch '08

"I think it would be sweet to have it at Disney World."

Checking In

Walking up and ready to dance, Travis Smith '09 and Emily Samuelson '09 show their ID's to get the okay to join the dance. "When I walked up to the desk I was ready to just have a night of fun!" said Samuelson '09.

"When I heard my name being called for Prom King, it was great. I felt like I was in the middle of a concert because everyone went bananas."

Terrence Williams '08

"When I heard my name being called I didn't really have any thoughts, but I did yell 'I got Queen!'"

Pouring Rain Did Not Dampen Graduation Excitement

Free at Last!

By Sara Duda '10 and Brittany Price '09

Commencement was a full day event, beginning with rehearsal that morning and ending with 269 graduates filing out, tassels turned to their left side.

"I was relieved once everything was all over; it was like it was the biggest day of my life at the time," said Corey Caldwell '08.

The weather attempted to dampen the mood with pouring rain and rumbles of thunder, but the excitement of officially completing 13 years of school over-powered the storm.

"The weather didn't really affect commencement, but it did affect things after. We couldn't do anything like take pictures, everyone just left," said Jaclyn Adkins '08.

At Honors Convocation, two days prior to Graduation day, scholarships and other awards were earned by students, with some earning more than one. The scholarships gave some graduates the extra push toward success and their own personal goals.

"The scholarships weren't difficult to get, you just had to take the time to look for them. But I'm most proud of the Pittman Scholarship because it was based on academics," said David Palmer '08.

Commencement is the final step of high school and the first on the long road of life. And not even pouring rain could prevent the class of 2008 from stepping out and embarking on their next journey.

All Smiles

Filing back to their seats after receiving their diplomas, Cassidy Smith '08 and LaDena Weathers '08 share their excitement.

"Finally it felt like I made it through! I was happy it was all over with," said Weathers.

Hug It Out

Sharing a hug in the hallway after the ceremony, Daisha Hale '08 and DeArron Haygood '08 finally realize high school is over. "None of it felt real. Then

I realized it was probably the last time I'd see most of these people," said Hale.

Will You Accept This Rose?

Receiving a yellow rose, the class flower, Kyle Seltzer '08 shakes hands with a class adviser, Mr. Mark Wilson. "It was an experience of a lifetime. You only get to do it once," said Seltzer.

What Was Your Funniest High School Lunch Memory?

"When they had a huge food fight in the West. It was so funny seeing everyone covered with food and running around."

Nicole Graczyk '08

Timothy Barber '08

"There was a food fight my sophomore year and someone threw a pizza and it hit the window behind me and just stuck."

"A lunch lady tried taking one of my nuggets and I slapped her hand away. She said, 'Hey I thought we were friends!'"

Sarah Burnett '08

Terrance Williams '08

"When I brought a radio to school one day we were listening to it at lunch and we got Rita to walk it out."

Turning of the Tassels

Turning their tassels from right to left, Laura Graczyk '08 and Brittany Hall '08 perform the final rite of passage of graduation. "It was a memorable moment, I felt like I was finally finished with Lincoln after being there all my life," said Graczyk.

"Commencement was everything I expected it to be and more. It was fun, especially in the halls before. And walking across the stage in front of all those people was awesome."

Kyle Brohl '08

"I was excited about Graduation. I felt like the spotlight was on me. I was nervous but happy at the same time."

HiddenAGENDA ORGANIZATIONS

Once the final bell for the day rings and the chaos is put on hold for another day, the real work begins: uncovering the mystery of what kids do to occupy their time, while making a positive imprint on the world. Peek through the locked doors of almost any classroom and there might be an organization in the planning stages of making an impact on the school or community.

Down the hallways, discover the Step Team preparing for their next performance, Student Council collecting cans for the needy, Drama Club rehearsing a scene or a Guitar Hero battle going on in the Computer Club lab.

The wide array of organizations may seem like a mystery, but do some investigating, gather the evidence and take a chance with one of them and you just may find your place.

Saving Lives
After giving blood, Rick Meurs '09 warms up with a Red Cross blanket and enjoys a snack to get his energy back up.

Important Decisions

During a class officer meeting, Brittany Hall '08 and Laura Grajczyk '08 discuss the year's upcoming activities. "It's cool to be able to make decisions concerning floats, class fundraisers and graduation," said Grajczyk.

Students Work to Spread the Word

Even if you did not notice, there were always students there to catch the unexpected moments of day-to-day school life.

Turn the corner and you might have seen the camera flash of a yearbook member in a neon green shirt, or an interview being given by a newspaper reporter. "In newspaper we get to go out and talk to all these different people about their perspective of the school," said Kyle Vanderlip '09.

WLHS was a trusted source for daily announcements and event camera work.

"How cool is it to be on TV throughout the whole school?" said Geoff Janowiak '08.

As the hardest workers of the school, the yearbook staff learned the tricks of the trade and toiled to meet deadlines and create an interesting and informative snapshot of the year.

BEHIND THE SCENES

By Erian Williams '09

What Happens Before the Big Day?

As an audience member, all you see is the final polished performance. What gets missed is all the sacrifice that leads up to the opening curtain. It all started with auditions.

"The hardest part of auditions is having a script that you haven't seen before and performing it", said

Sean Houston '10.

The first day of rehearsals was usually the easiest day because it consisted of reading through the script and playing games. Once the first day is over, the real rehearsals start. These may last until 7pm or later.

Often these late sessions were made fun by having late night paint sessions or doing things as a group afterward.

Opening night arrived and the energy backstage was palpable.

"Jumping around screaming 'Go, Ninja, Go' gets me pumped before the show," said Felicity Stevenson '10.

Then the final 'break a legs' were said and the curtain rose. The sun came out, indeed.

Two Of A Kind

Finishing up their only duet in the show, Christopher Branham '08 and Rachel Gottman '09 strike a pose. "I Don't Have Anything But You" was definitely the most fun to perform, even though Chris was a little uncoordinated at times," said Gottman, kidding.

What is your favorite thing about being involved in Drama?

"I love staying after school. Except for the part where you pass out from excess paint fumes and stress."

-Amanda Sumrall '09

"All of your friends are together. You can sing with them, act with them and be weird with them."

-Rick Meurs '09

"Drama sounded like so much fun. I love all the friends I've made and without Drama, I would be bored."

-Keely Battle '11

Smooth as a Baby's Bottom
Showing his dedication to the club, Christopher Branham '08 shaves his head for the drama club production of "Annie". "I didn't want to shave my head at first but after I did it, I got used to it," said Branham.

The Roaring 20's
Performing their favorite song in the show, Analea Lessenberry '08 and Rick Meurs '09 sing and dance through "Easy Street". "Easy Street was fun in the end, but in the beginning, it was one of the more difficult songs in the show," said Lessenberry.

Playing with Fire

Performing at the Homecoming game, Kelsey Lamkin '11 dances, using fire, with the band. Lamkin attends Washtenaw Community College, but is a proud member of the LHS Band.

Do you get sad when marching band season is over?

"Yes. There's people who I most likely won't see again. It's upsetting because we've had a lot of memories"

-Lindsey Young '09

"I don't really get sad. Although, I may miss high school band [after graduation]. Every year brings new experiences."

FORGET ME NOT

By Erian Williams '09

Remembering All The Time Spent Together As A Family

It's May and all of the seniors have left. The "bandies", as they call themselves, prepare for their final exams. Their exam involves playing a scale, as well as a written exam.

"Band exams are pretty easy. I don't even have to study," said Elizabeth Gillespie '10.

Next, the grads return for a potluck banquet. During the banquet, a slide show plays, with images of the season's events and memories. Then, the drum majors for the next year are announced. As the evening winds down, the realization sets in that some will be leaving forever, and others will not see their friends until band camp. But, they can always remember the high and low notes of the season and look forward to a fresh start next year.

"Band is like a family. We may fight with each other but we are always there for each other," said William Micik '09.

RULING THE SCHOOL

By Jade Ross '08

Students Lead to Make a Difference

Fact: School leadership roles look good on a college application. This may be one of the reasons so many students add it to their to-do lists.

Additionally, it allows students to speak out and be heard. It allows them to change things and bring about new ideas. Since complaining only gets you so far, someone must take action.

Every organization needs a leader. Their jobs are not easy.

"It's all about doing what needs to be done," said Jade Harris '09.

One of the more vocal groups was Student Council, who organized Homecoming events.

"It was a lot of work and a lot of it fell on the president and myself, but it was worth it" said Jaelyn Adkins '08.

With pressures from their class, officers try to live up to high expectations.

"It takes a lot of work to make sure everything is in place, but I try to make it a good year for my class," said Ciara Turnage '08.

USO Members Come Together to Help the Community

The United Student Organization (USO) aims to express unity within youth. Its members did this by participating in volunteer work around the community.

Too often USO is misunderstood as a "black" club, but the goals of the group are the opposite. It was organized as a club to promote racial harmony.

"It's given me the opportunity to learn and practice leadership and followership. It's also opened my eyes to how helping others can be rewarding," said Danielle Weatherspoon '08.

Along with volunteer work, USO's Step Team performs all over the community.

Their premiere performance so far was opening a college fair at Oakland University.

USO continues to grow and teach life lessons.

"I've developed teamwork and leadership skills as well as how to communicate very clearly," said Daisha Hale '08.

Choir is a Friend and Memory That Will Always Remain

Our four choir programs are highly respected and very popular among students.

"Choir means so much to me. I don't know what I would have done without it the past four years. I love to sing and it is a lot of fun," said April Wynne '08.

High school choir may be the last chance for senior students to be in the spotlight. It is also a chance to make long-lasting friends.

Choir moves people in ways never imagined. There is more to singing than just the voices and notes.

"I always want to know the meaning behind my music. Mrs. Nevins does a good job of telling us the meanings," said Lindsay Guterrez '10.

Our choirs rank well at Festival and various other competitions. The program, while strong, is more recognized for the close-knit, family-like camaraderie between the singers.

WHY SPONSOR?

Teachers Take on Extra Responsibilities of After-School Activities for Little Pay

Most people would say that having a full time job is more than enough, but not for some teachers who choose to sponsor an organization or club.

"I did not choose to sponsor Railsplitters for Christ; He chose the Railsplitters. I simply just open up my room to allow students to read the Bible," said Mr. Ron McCarty.

Teachers usually choose to sponsor clubs to allow students to have more activities outside of the classroom. This sacrifice comes with little monetary reward.

"I have sponsored yearbook for nine years, and while I do get paid a small stipend, I certainly don't do it for the money. It is my creative outlet and a way to interact with students on a different level. I am going to miss it next year when Mr. Elstone takes over," said Mrs. Jessica Winters, who resigned as yearbook adviser to start a family.

For students, being in an organization looks good on job and college applications, creates opportunities to make a difference in the community and is a place to make new friends, often whom includes the adviser.

Student Groups Struggle with Membership and Recognition

It's no secret that our school lags behind other districts when it comes to membership opportunities.

As interest dwindles, the few organizations we do have also disappear. The latest casualty was Students Against Destructive Decisions, better known as SADD.

While Computer Club

hung on, membership was down and threats of a computer lab shut-down (due to thefts as a result of negligence during the school day) loomed.

One small group, Railsplitters for Christ, had weathered the storms throughout the years, but suffered published obscurity due to questions of legality thanks to a "little" amendment calling for separation of Church and State.

After a consult with the Civil Liberties Union, it was determined that any group meeting on school grounds bearing the Lincoln name is eligible for yearbook inclusion.

NHS and Key Club Members Exceed Expectations

As students, there is much expected of us. Some students exceed these expectations and then some. These are members of NHS and Key Club.

Planning community service, bottle drives and blood drives are just a few of the additional services provided.

Why add more to an already busy schedule?

"There's so many choices of volunteer work you can be involved in and it really helps out the community," said Emily Alford '10.

Hours upon hours of their lives were spent just helping out the community.

The clubs met just once a month but managed to get the job done. Inductions were held early in the year. NHS members must first be invited, then fill out an application and be accepted by a panel of teachers based on teacher ratings, etc.

Common KNOWLEDGE

ACADEMICS

There are some certainties in life: Grass is green, taxes are due on April 15, if something can go wrong, it will...things like that. In school, there are also basic tenets by which we all abide: Seniors are always right, do not go against the flow of traffic in the main hallway, having a sub means "free day". These are "common knowledge", if you will.

However, Academics have their own set of principles. Some are logical, others seem to be under the radar that only those in the "inner circle" know about. For example, everyone expects Calculus and AP Chemistry to be hard classes. What some may not be privy to is the fact that, in some classes, the amount of work assigned is directly proportional to the teacher given. Also, Yearbook is not a blow-off class and English is more than just speaking the language. Lastly, one test CAN make a difference and you do need to do ALL your homework.

Students Pay a Price for Lack of Punctuality/Absences

By Victoria Caraccia '10

There were minor consequences for being late or skipping. Some teachers gave detention, many made a phone call home, while others may have issued a referral. There were serious questions as to the consistency of school policy when it comes to the definition of a tardy versus an absence. Even more controversy ensued when the topic of skipping is brought up.

"If a person feels like skipping, why not? I wouldn't skip, I don't want to ruin my future. It is very easy to fall behind when you skip classes. Teachers will usually give you a hard time if you don't have a good excuse," said Katelyn Olson '10.

Teachers actually would like a consistent school policy to deal with those who make the decision to skip. The Council for Excellence looked into this possibility as an agenda topic.

Katelyn Olson '10

Robert Gora '09

"We have been looking at new ways for the school to handle the absent and tardy policies. One of the consequences we are looking at is having your grade go down if you are absent so many times," said Mr. Elstone.

Students helped other students get in the building without detection with the help of technology: a simple text message request to meet at or prop a certain door proved invaluable. Savvy students could always find a way to help a buddy out, even during class time. A simple pass request and the favor was met. Usually no one was looking anyway.

"I sometimes skip. If I skip I just skip the whole day. I don't see the point in skipping just one hour or just half the day. It doesn't make sense," said Robert Gora '09.

Love them or hate them, projects and presentations were an inevitable part of most classes. This may be a reflection of the adult work force where more and more job descriptions required these abilities, especially the ability to work as a group toward a common goal.

"I like projects that aren't group projects because it's an easy way for me to get my grades up," said Aviva Neff '10.

As we know, there are some classes that gave more projects than others. The obvious ones are science, art and English. One of the major annual science projects given to students in biology classes was rat dissection during second semester.

While intriguing to some, and educational for all, there were students who protested the activity due to personal beliefs or weak stomachs.

Art students created five to six projects in preparation for the art show in the library at the end of the year.

Media Center Offers More Than Meets the Eye

By Kayla Schafer '09

One glance at the "library" and students automatically assumed it was a place for a certain group of students and the only things to be found there were books and computers. A closer peek into the inner workings of our media center proved there were more than just books.

Students are presented with many options when entering the media center doors. In addition to checking out a book or surfing the 'Net, students opted for browsing the magazine racks, purchasing a healthy snack and school supplies or getting advice on how to research or write a paper for class.

Many students did not realize they have all of these options. The sale of pencils and folders helped many a forgetful student.

Mr. Kyle Kipp, the Media Specialist, can be found on hand to assist in finding research materials or websites for class assignments.

Persuaded to offer a healthy variety, Mr. Kipp sold candy and assorted snacks during passing time as a fundraiser to bring in guest speakers, such as Jeff Kass and the Poetry Slam troupe and other services.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays after school, the center was abuzz with students taking advantage of free math tutoring and the writing center for papers.

Covert Operations

SPORTS

For many, the covert operations in sports have to do with the stealthy plays coaches come up with and jot down in playbooks. These are guarded with absolute secrecy to undermine the opponent and prevent a sneak attack resulting in a loss.

However, with the exception of boys football, basketball and hockey, many sporting contests themselves are the covert operations...because so few spectators witness the events. The sad reality is that women's sports in particular are often overlooked. This carries into the world of professional sports, as well, creating fewer opportunities for women and an unequal share of the wealth. The solution, as of yet, is still under lock and key.

It is more than just a game; it is an emotion for many varsity football players around the country. As fun as it is, players agree that it is frustrating to go without a win for so, so long (five win-less seasons and counting). What keeps players coming back? For most, it comes down to the old adage: "for the love of the game".

For others, they come back for various reasons, none of which include being a glutton for punishment. Some of the reasons may be that they love the thrill of combat or just play to stay in shape.

"I have dedication for the sport and I believe we can win," said Alex Neitling '09.

Most athletes play sports their senior year because it is usually the time recruiters are out scoping college talent. Scholarships aside, there is something to be said for loyalty.

JV, Freshmen Teams Battle it Out

Throughout the jv and freshmen seasons, the two scrimmaged together often. Chances of injury increase when pitting younger players against older players, but may be necessary to get these players field-ready. The two teams had a lot to learn from each other, as well. The jv players can be somewhat idols for the freshmen by showing them what high school football is all about and breaking them into the competition.

"It was fun practicing with jv; it gave us bragging rights when we beat them," said Eric Ewald '11.

While varsity earned its own field and practice time, freshmen and jv teams not only share the same practice field, but they also practice together. Being a freshmen is hard hard enough, but they also have the jv squad beating up on them beating every week during practice.

"Freshmen were pretty good so playing them made us better players," said Jeremy Cooley '10.

Since the freshmen team is a farm club for jv, and jv players rise to varsity, it's all about taking turns and tough love.

Cheer Your Heart Out

An Age-Old Controversy Continues...

By Mollie Patton '09

Cheerleading? A sport? No way! That's what many people think when cheerleaders say it's a sport. "How could it be? All you do is say cheers and lift girls up!" From first hand experience, it's much harder than anyone gives it credit for, plus it lasts two seasons not one.

Cheerleaders must have the ability to multi-task: from cheering, to moving, to stunting and more. They have to know what to do and when to do it, or someone gets hurt. Timing and memorization is key.

"You have to really know what you're doing. You can't just go into practice and do it. You have to actually think about everything and know you can do it," said Sara Duda '10.

What people may not realize is that cheerleaders try to promote school spirit. During Homecoming, the cheerleading squads made signs to put in the hallways, decorated the boys locker room before the game and decorated the stadium. Without the behind-the-scenes contribution of cheerleaders, none of these things would have been done.

"I love to show spirit and get everybody pumped up. It's the best feeling to be a cheerleader. To see people tear down our signs and disrespect out school hurts me," said Morgan Kocis '09.

The cheerleaders have had it rough. From coaching switches over the past three years, to being behind in many important parts of their team, the cheerleader work as a team and keep their spirits, and ours, up.

Lean Back

Sadly, Raven Burrus '08 and Camille Foreman '08 dance to the band as they play at their last pep rally. Senior cheerleaders, despite being role models for the younger girls, felt the experience was bittersweet.

"I loved cheering my senior year! It was awesome! I was a varsity cheerleader and I was surrounded by people I love! The only thing I would change is that it is all coming to an end."

Raven Burrus '08

"Why do people become cheerleaders? What makes it so interesting? I saw the high school girls when I was little and thought they were pretty and talented. I wanted to be a part of it. I wanted to be like them."

3. Girls' Cross Country, ready to run
4. A pre-run group huddle
5. Alexander Kline '10

Cross Country has been underestimated and underrepresented in the past few years. Runners work to maintain their physical condition and stamina, but because meets are not at school and travel is required, few spectators get to see the action that goes on behind the scenes. Working out almost every day in the summer and during school, cross country is not what we think it is.

During the summer the boys and girls run about SIX miles a day. And that's not all...then there is conditioning.

"I like to conditioning because it gets me in shape before the season starts. It's hard work but I don't want to suck when the season begins," said Ryan Johnson '09.

Like many other sports, cross country includes both mental and physical strength. Without one or the other, running is almost impossible. Mental strength is necessary to make it through when every muscle is saying STOP. Runners must have the physical strength to keep going without getting hurt. The team is there for support and encouragement, but cross country is truly an individual competition.

"Cross Country is both mental and physical strength because you need to think you can do it. And you also need the strength to run," said John Adamovicz '11.

Cross Country may sound like a peaceful jog through the woods, however, when the timer is ticking and a team is counting on you, there is more going on than meets the eye.

Limber Up

Stretching for their race, the girls' cross country team prepares for the long road ahead. "We always encourage each other to do our best. It's something we always do and it helps us all," said Alexandra Hadley '11.

"I like running but there are some days when I just feel tired. I'm afraid I'm not doing my best out there."
Chad Opfermann '11

"We run six miles a day and we also work out two to three times a week. It's a lot of work, but it's only for the better so we don't look bad when we go out for our first race."

A Turn Around Season

Successful Season Thanks to Seniors

By Joshua Williams '09

With the team of consisting of mostly seniors, the varsity team improved greatly with an overall record of 8-6-1 versus last year's 5-9-2 record.

"Soccer season was a big turn around from last year," said Brian Wilcox '09.

With most of the varsity team graduating, it will be tough for the upcoming JV team to capitalize on the momentum.

"We were all mainly seniors with the exception of a few juniors and we had many key players who helped with our great season," said Steven Gurka '08.

In order to have a good team, the players should have chemistry and know how each other will react during plays.

"The varsity team had a good group that played club, which was a plus. But what was even better was that we have played together for a long time," said Kyle Selter '08.

Nearly all the players left on a positive note with aspirations of playing college-level soccer.

"We couldn't have asked for anything better, with the exception of a district win," said Tony McClure '08.

Winner Take All

4. Anne Dosey '08.
5. Angelica Reyes '08.

Not only were the seasons flipped, but the coaching staff rotated as well. Coach Kuzich returned to coach the season after leaving in 2000.

Based on the State of Michigan court's decision, seasons switched for volleyball and other varsity sports including tennis, girls basketball and both boys and girls golf.

"It made it really hard for me because I had to juggle homework, volleyball and marching band all in one season," said Angelica Reyes '08.

This meant that the girls had to start conditioning almost four months earlier than they were used to.

"I am affected by the change because it threw off my timing for Homecoming, but it's good because I don't have to run after those big holiday meals," said Laura Grajczyk '08, laughing.

Team Bonding

Hustling over for a quick time out to listen to what Coach Kuzich has to say, Ebony Johnson '08 and others plan their next move. "She always told us to be more aggressive, it always helped me to step up my game," said Johnson '08.

Young Players Look to Varsity for Inspiration

By Josh Williams '09

It seems everyone on the jv or freshman team had a style of play or a work ethic they admired in more experienced players, whether professional athletes or girls right here on varsity.

While some of the girls looked up to a fellow teammate who had different strengths to offer, most looked up to successful varsity players, who are coached by Andrea Kuzich, who watches the jv and freshman teams for raw or potential talent.

"Some qualities that I look for in a future varsity player would be athleticism, competitiveness, academic eligibility and attitude," said Kuzich.

One girl might have a quality that another girl might not have. But put them all together and it created a varsity team that was a model for up and coming jv and freshmen teams.

"Erin Moffett is definitely a varsity idol because she is such an amazing athlete, but yet she is so young. She is a great hitter and has determination," said Sara Truhn '11.

Shared Wealth

Professional athletes are the tops in their sport; they exceed limits and expectations and are paid well for their efforts. While unpaid, high school athletes often dream of a "green" future. However, some sports do not have the professional counterpart that teens can emulate and yearn for. Swimming and equestrian are two such teams, and those who participate do it for the love of the sport.

"I ride because I like to ride. I look at other riders for inspiration to take my riding to the next level," said Brittany Price '09.

Most people don't realize the amount of time athletes spend in practice. For the swim team, that meant swim-suiting up at 5am and diving into the chilly morning waters of the pool, only to face a six hour school day afterward. This required dedication.

"Getting up so early will put you in a daze the rest of the day, but it's worth it when you see improvement," said Elisha Cupp '08.

The equestrian team faced the bigger challenge of boarding and maintaining their own horses, finding places to ride, competing amidst urban sprawl and simply finding the time to enjoy their sport.

Girls Golf and Boys Tennis Try to Emulate the Pros

Tiger Woods. Venus and Serena Williams. Andy Roddick. Michelle Wei. Andre Agassi. Annika Sorenstram. Arthur Ashe. Maria Sharapova. Jack Nicklaus. Some might even say Anna Kournikova.

The above are athletes who are famous for their sport. They put in time, dedication and hard work to be the best. They are inspirational to players who want to achieve the same goals.

"My favorite tennis player is Rafeal LeDal because he is one of the few right-handed tennis players. Since I'm right-handed as well, it gives me even more motivation to do well on the court," said Amid Alexander '08.

Many will say that playing the games of tennis and golf are easy and somewhat relaxing. In actuality, both require agility and prowess. Tennis enjoys a reputation of elegance and prestige, often played by the wealthy. Golf, on the other hand, has become a national pastime for all generations and economic levels.

Mind Over Matter

Placing the ball, Coleen Huling '08 focuses on perfect positioning for a bogey. "I really have learned so much about the game of golf. I understand how to be focused when it's just me and the ball," said Huling '08.

Crowd May Affect Player Performance

Picture it: Sprinting down the court with a crossover leaping to the open lay up. Nothin' but net; the crowd goes wild.

Most players dream of this scenario, while many experience it first-hand. Success is often found while under crowd pressure, positive or negative.

"When I hear or see the opposing crowd cheering against me it makes me perform better and makes me want to play harder and gets me hype," said Terrance Williams '08'.

On the other hand, the crowd head-trip may not even affect some focused players who tune it out.

"The crowd really does not affect me, I just play my game and do work no matter what the atmosphere," said Ryan Walton '09'.

Some players do not perform well under pressure. They allow the crowd to "get in their head". While this may seem like a weakness, it is a fact of human nature. After all, even Michael Jordan is human.

"The crowd makes me play a lot better. It really gets me going and my energy feeds off the crowd."

Nathan McMullan '08

"The crowd doesn't affect any judgements that I make. The crowd is just something that comes with the game. I am never in tune with the crowd and sometimes I don't even hear them."

Working hard, basketball players step up for the varsity coaches. Having athletic ability is not enough anymore. Coaches are looking at grades more every year.

"Yes, I look at their grades. And if they are not at the required GPA., I cut them. They are student athletes and student comes before athlete," said Coach Anthony Finley.

As the players work toward the next level, they play even in the off-season. Whether it is conditioning with the soccer or track team, they are keeping in shape.

"I practice in the off season. I usually just shoot around and condition a lot. You practice how you play," said Julius Kidd '09.

During season the players work to keep their grades up. If their grades are low then they cannot play.

"I have never had to sit on the bench because of grades. And I hope I never have to," said Samantha Pace '10.

The teams have worked hard, kept their grades up and will hopefully make it on the varsity team next year.

Foul Hard or Stay At Home

Season Plagued by Injuries

Playing sports in high school could lead to playing in college, which in turn may lead to a professional career. As players made their way through the varsity season, every player hoped their was a recruiter taking notes in the stands, ready to make a scholarship offer. Every lay-up, free throw and jump shot was an opportunity to make it to the top.

However, there was always a snag in the plan. Injuries. Unpredictable, unavoidable and all too common. Pulled ham strings, torn ACL's, ripped Achilles, tendonitis, shin splits and ankle sprains were the injuries du jour over the course of this and any other season. Any of these injuries could mean the end of any player's career.

"When I fractured my hand, I was devastated. It happened so fast and I didn't realize that my hand was broken until my coach tried to pull me up and my hand was crooked. With my injury, I had to sit out for a quarter of the season," said Brittany Williams '09.

Everyone would agree if painful nights and injuries could be avoided the game of basketball could be more enjoyable but with injuries comes heart and determination.

What injuries were most common during the season?

Hockey, Swimming and Wrestling Watch the Clock

Hockey, wrestling and swimming all required intensive training. Hockey practice began at 10pm, while swimmers gathered at the wee hour of 5am. Wrestlers had to stay after school for practice, running the halls, all while following a strict diet to maintain weight class.

"We stopped morning practices and now it's starting late. I just work hard and wake myself up when morning comes around. Oh, and try not to fall asleep in too many of my classes," said Jason Himes '09, a hockey player.

In order to be the best athletes, they gave up free time to build their endurance for goal achievement. On top of all the morning, day and late night practices, there are late matches, weekend games and long tournaments.

"I just keep my mind on why I go through it. It's tough, but worth it when you win. Working your butt off in practice makes you that much better in your game or match," said Wrestler Nathan Mullins '09.

Track Team Rebuilds from the Bottom

Having a strong core to feed from as well as gaining motivation and encouragement are all essential to any sport team. Underclassmen are easily influenced by upperclassmen who have experienced the ups and downs of a season, the long bus rides, the exhausting practices, the close races and the ability to bounce back after tough losses.

A team that bonds under the leadership and experience of the upperclassmen often leads to a winning and memorable season.

"The upperclassmen from last year had a rough season, so this season I wanted to come in and beat the records. I looked up to past seniors as motivation to run hard at every practice. I have gained heart by watching the determination of those who came before me who have been through the rough times," said Ashely Betts '10.

Knowing that a support system is the building block of a winning team can always be a real boost of morale.

The Youth of the Nation

By Jackie Vallance '08

Age Not an Issue for Varsity Baseball

The boys baseball team was an extremely young program. There were only two seniors to lead the team. The junior class makes up most of the team, with only one sophomore.

"Having such a young team was okay, I guess. I don't think it would change our performance. It will just help better us for next year's season," said Terrell Williams '09.

The young talent excelled from playing together for years prior.

"We have all been playing together since Little League. I think it has helped with the team unity and built up a solid knowledge of how each other plays," said Brandon Boyle '09.

Typically, a varsity team is made up of mostly seniors, yet this squad used youth to its advantage and ended up with a better-than-expected record.

"Back in the day..." Softball players reminisce about their first mits, first games and first teammates. Playing with your same friends up until senior year was simply priceless for a few lucky players.

"It was really cool that some seniors got to play and prepare for college ball together after growing up playing ball together," said Brittany Price '09.

Playing a sport that you love is one of the greatest feelings you can have. Especially when playing with friends that you have known forever. The seniors may not have ended their last year of high school softball with the greatest record, but nothing beat playing with friends.

"Of course everyone wants to win all their games but this year was really fun for me because I got to play with my friends and have fun," said Michelle Allen '08.

Stowe Saves Season After Coach Loss

By Mollie Patton '09

After losing the varsity soccer coach, Coach Terri, due to family health problems, Coach Bob Stowe stepped up to the challenge.

"I liked it when he took over. Although he didn't coach us, he was still there by us to help us out if we needed it," said Lindsey Neel '08.

During the games, the jv and varsity teams encouraged each other to push through and work hard. Without a coach, it was tough to come out on top.

"We played pretty well under the circumstances. Some things changed and some didn't, but for the situation I think it turned out pretty well," said Rebecca Studer '09.

Though the scoreboard may not show it, the teams learned a lesson this year. You cannot rely on a coach because you never know what can happen halfway through the season. You should always be a team and help each other through everything.

"We focused on playing and working hard for Coach Terri and Coach Stowe. They wanted us all to stay focused and play our best and that's what we did," said Brooke Hogan '09.

Coach Stowe took on a big task and did his best to put the teams in shape. The girls learned the real definition of "team" this season.

Most people have someone they look up to. Role models are defined as those who set a positive example. Exiting seniors often play that role to younger players.

"I look up to David Palmer because he thrives at everything he does and is very competitive. He is also an all-around good athlete," said Alexander Neitling '09.

Seniors are often given a leadership position on a team, whether they want it or not. It just comes with the territory. There are plenty of responsibilities that come along with being a leader. Running practices, giving it your all even when you do not want to and helping out younger teammates are just some of the ways the seniors set a good example.

"Teaching other players skills, getting the team pumped up before the game and setting a good example is just part of the responsibilities for a leader, but it pays off in the end," said Kyle Anguilm '08.

Scurrying away from a Green Hills defender, Alexander Neitling '08 quickly feeds the ball to his teammate. After the pass, Neitling got back into his ready position.

UnderSURVEILLANCE UNDERCLASSMEN

Pie in the Face
During the pie eating contest, Julius Kidd '09 stuffs his face. The person who eats the most pie first wins the contest for their entire grade.

What is it about being an underclassmen that makes you feel like you are under a microscope? Is it possible that everyone is watching or is it your imagination? While it seems that every misstep, gaffe or mind-numbingly embarrassing moment gets caught on tape only to played over and over for the amusement of upperclassmen, the truth is...no one is paying attention. And no one cares.

Maybe the administration keeps a more vigilant eye on its younger students, either because they have a higher tendency to screw up or for their protection from the "big kids", but for the most part, everyone simply does their thing and has little tolerance for what others do.

So when it comes to feeling "watched", underclassmen should not feel singled out. Just get outta the way and let everyone get on with their day.

PrimeSUSPECTS

SENIORS

Suspects. Culprits. Victims. Leaders. Graduates. Senior adjectives were as numerous as their responsibilities in that all-important final year.

"My main concerns were keeping my grades up, actually going to class and getting through the year to graduate on time," said Tantaneice Scott '08.

Aside from meeting graduation requirements, seniors were expected to set good examples for the underclassmen, while every instinct suggested the opposite. For many, senior year meant taking it easy and taking advantage. Often victims of "senioritis", these so-called leaders of the school often make up the lion's share of tardies and skipped classes. After all, "senior skip day" was coined in their honor.

In the end, senior year was all about making the choices that would ensure their release papers.

Senior Pride
Hearing his name called for varsity
soccer, John Oliver
'08 cheers on.

The senior t-shirt shows off the seniors' last day of high school. "I bought a shirt because I thought they'd never see and I would actually wear it," said Amanda Bush '08.

Classified INFORMATION

COMMUNITY SUPPORT

Looking through a yearbook, one of the most skipped sections is probably the advertisement section. Most people just flip right past, because this section is seen as "boring" or "useless". But in reality, without these businesses, and without their support, our yearbook would be nothing.

Local merchants who purchase ads really help our funding and expand our options and coverage. Also, without these businesses, our community would be nothing. So take the time to check out the businesses in our area that took the time and money to support our school. And in return, please support them.

An Irish temper, beautiful red hair.
Compassionate nature with energy to spare.
A blessing for us, although not without strife.
You're mature, vivacious and so full of life.
This chapter is ending, another ready to start.
As you take the next step use your head and your heart.

Colophon

The 565 copies of the 2008 Liberator were printed in Winston-Salem, NC. The all-color size 8 book was printed on 80 lb gloss paper. The cover is a custom high gloss litho with a UV coat. The theme "Lincoln Confidential" was conceived by Corey Caldwell '08. This concept conveys the fact that LHS, despite annual growth, still remains one of Washtenaw County's best kept secrets. The 170-page book, volume 55, uses American Typewriter as its primary typeface. A final staff of 15 completed the book using Jostens Online.

A majority of senior portraits were taken by Prestige Portraits in Ann Arbor (see ad, page 160).

Books sold for a registration special price of $45, and were regularly priced at $60 throughout the year at www.yearbooksonsale.com as well as www.jostens.com.

The Liberator Adviser would like to thank the following: Ms. Lynn Lauri, Ms. Kelly Huling, Ms. Jodie Hotchkiss, Mr. Tim Schaefer at Prestige, all class/club sponsors, coaches who were cooperative, each of our page sponsors and advertisers, LHS administrators, Mr. John McGehee and staff, Mr. Mike Berg, Ms. Karen Nevins, longtime supporter Mr. Martin Jacobs, the custodial staff, Jostens Plant Rep Kristin Stimmel, Jostens Rep Pat Streb and most of all, Mr. Jason Elstone, who will not only be taking over as adviser next year, but who came in and kept the 2008 book on schedule while I was on maternity leave having Lucy Jonelle.

"Thank you, Lincoln community, for allowing me nine great years as adviser. Throughout the ups and downs of yearbook advising, I feel honored to have made a contribution to the lasting memories of so many and will miss the challenge and creativity yearbook production provides. It will be missed."
 -Mrs. Jessica Winters

Without A TRACE

Secrets were revealed, privacies violated, securities compromised. The school year vanished without a trace, out of sight. With plenty of witnesses, however, it will not be soon forgotten.

While under strict surveillance, memories were made, alibis provided and suspects cleared.
